Avonlea School

DOI
https://doi.org/10.32393/jlmms/2023.0001 Published on Fri, 05/19/2023 - 16:14

Down the valley,
she is whitewashed
and low.

Earnest eaves stick out, like tongues waving welcomes
and warnings;
hold onto those leather straps!
Keep the books dry!

Windows invite tapping,
allow for sneaking looks, peekings in at mouthy desks carved
with dull love letters, edged with dust.

Pink crumbs from raspberry tarts shared scatter among girls
who w o /a n d e r then

cluster the stoop,
whispering about slate slams.

She sits comfortably, nestled in among fussy fir branches that shake at those who scamper past,
late again from imagining ghosts.

The brook sticks close to her—a natural ally.
She too hums knowingly and also stays down,
her attention remaining on cooling milk and hot hands with easy babbling.

Together, both quietly hold autumn close, capturing leaves in the doorway or washing them downstream, shushing crinkling just in time for poetry hour.

About the Author: Amber Moore is a Banting Postdoctoral Fellow at Simon Fraser University. Her research interests include adolescent literacies, feminist pedagogies, teacher education, arts-based research, rape culture, and trauma literature, particularly YA sexual assault narratives. Her work can be found in journals such as Cultural Studies ↔ Critical Methodologies, Feminist Media Studies, Journal of Adolescent and Adult Literacy, and Qualitative Inquiry, among others. She also enjoys writing poetry. Email: amberjanellemoore@gmail.com

Acknowledgements: This work is very generously supported by the Banting Postdoctoral Fellowships program.

Geographical Information: This poem was written on the ancestral, traditional, and unceded territories of the Squamish, Musqueam, and Tsleil-Waututh First Nations, where the author lives and works as uninvited guest and settler. These lands are also known as Vancouver, in British Columbia, Canada.

Banner Image: Book cover for Anne of Avonlea, 1991. kindredspaces.ca, 117B-AA-SCHOLASTIC.

Article Info

Creative Commons License

Copyright: Amber Moore, 2023. This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License (Creative Commons BY 4.0), which allows the user to share, copy and redistribute the material in any medium or format and adapt, remix, transform and build upon the material for any purpose, even commercially, PROVIDED the Licensor is given attribution in accordance with the terms and conditions of the CC BY 4.0.

Peer reviewed
Yes